Western Producer Prairie Books Fonds. - 1954-1988. - 23 m of textual records. - 236 photographs: b&w, colour; 20 X 25 cm and smaller.

Administrative history:

Dates: Western Producer Prairie Books was established as an independent department of the newspaper Western Producer in 1975. It was dissolved when its assets were sold to Douglas and McIntyre of Vancouver in the fall of 1991.

Mandate:

The mandate of Western producer Prairie books was to publish books which would contribute to the enjoyment and enlightenment of the farmers of western Canada, to preserve a record of western tradition and history, and to encourage western writers. Manuscripts relating to the three Prairie Provinces, the various types of farming found in the region, and the ethnic groups which settled Western Canada were among those selected for publication.

Predecessor and Successor Bodies:

Prior to the establishment of Western Producer Prairie Books, books were published by the Western Producer itself. It began to publish in 1954, and in 1968 the Prairie Books Committee was established to deal specifically with the publication of books. In 1973 Prairie Books purchased the publishing rights, remaining books and unbound sheets of the Institute of Applied Arts Ltd. from the estate of William Clarence Richards of Edmonton, its publisher. To obtain Manitoba title for Prairie Books the list of Prairie Publishing Co. Ltd. was purchased from J.A.D. Stuart of Winnipeg. In 1975, the new Editor and Publisher of the Western Producer, R. Phillips, decided that the book publishing end of the business could no longer be run through the Executive Editor. He hired a manager, who would be in charge of editorial and marketing functions and Chairman of what had become the Publications Selection committee. Soon after, additional staff members were added, and in that same year, Western Producer Prairie Books became an independent department.

In the fall of 1991, Western Producer Prairie Books' assets were sold to Douglas and McIntyre of Vancouver.

Administrative Relationships:

When Western Producer Prairie Books was an independent department of the newspaper, Western Producer. It was subsidized by the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, which also owns the Western Producer.

Administrative Structure:

When Western Producer Prairie Books was established as an independent department in 1975, a managerial position was created. This manager was in charge of both editorial and marketing functions. Additional staff members were added at this same time.

Other Significant Information:

The Western Producer put out its first book, To Find the Daily Bread, by Jacob Fast, in 1954 after releasing it in installments in the Western Producer. The next year, the newspaper took on its first commercial venture in book publishing, with the publication of So Soon Forgotten by Dick Fairfax.

In 1958, the new Editor and Publisher of the Western Producer, T.R. Melville-Ness, established the position of promotion manager, who would be responsible for the promotion and sale of books. Prior to this, books were advertised and sold directly through the newspaper. By 1966, the number of manuscripts awaiting publication had increased enough to necessitate publishing some books straight from manuscripts, rather than serializing them in the newspaper first. This new process put a great deal of strain on the printing plant and eventually resulted in the creation of the Prairie Books Committee in April of 1968, establishing a structure for the publication of books.

Douglas and McIntyre of Vancouver, who purchased the assets of Western Producer Prairie Books, started the imprint, Greystone Books. This publisher maintains a mandate similar to that of Prairie Books. It also holds the rights to the publication of all books that had been put out by Western Producer Prairie Books.

Custodial history:

The records comprising the Western Producer Prairie Books fonds were maintained by Western Producer Prairie Books. They were transferred directly from Prairie Books' offices.

Scope and content:

Fonds consists of records related to the publishing of books and calendars.

Immediate source of acquisition:

Records were transferred from Western Producer Prairie Books on August 29, 1989.

This is a closed fonds. Prior permission from the donor must be obtained.

INTRODUCTION

Western Producer Prairie Books got its start as part of the newspaper, Western Producer. The paper put out its first book, To Find the Daily Bread, in 1954 after releasing it in installments in the Western Producer. The book was published on the request of the author, Jacob Fast, who had refused payment for his manuscript. Instead he was given 200 copies of his book in pamphlet form. The next year, the newspaper took on its first commercial venture in book publishing, with the publication of So Soon Forgotten by Dick Fairfax. The book had a stitched, semi-sift cover and a royalty of ten percent went to the author.

In 1958, the new Editor and Publisher of the Western Producer, T.R. Melville-Ness, established the position of promotion manager, who would be responsible for the promotion and sale of books. Prior to this, books were advertised and sold directly through columns in the newspaper. In 1966, the number of manuscripts awaiting publication had increased enough to necessitate the publishing of some books straight from manuscripts, rather than publishing the book in its entirety after it had been released as a serial in the newspaper. This new process put a great deal of strain on the printing plant and eventually resulted in the creation of the Prairie Books Committee in April of 1968, establishing a structure for the publication of books. In 1975, new Editor and Publisher R. Phillips decided that the book publishing end of the business could no longer be run through the Executive Editor. Rob Sanders was hired as manager of Prairie Books, in charge of both editorial and marketing functions and Chairman of what had become the Publications Selection Committee. Soon after, additional staff members were added, and in that same year, Western Producer Prairie Books became an independent department.

Western Producer Prairie Books was subsidized by the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, through a process of borrowing capital and returning earnings. Its objective was to cover costs from sales. It received grants from the Canadian Book Publishing Development Program and the Canada Council Block Grant Program. At first, Prairie Books marketed solely to Western Producer subscribers. Later, it expanded its market to eventually distribute on an international level in the 1980s.

In the Fall of 1991 Western Producer Prairie Books' assets were sold to Douglas and McIntyre of Vancouver, who started the imprint, Greystone Books. This publisher maintains a mandate similar to that of Prairie Books. It also holds the rights to the publication of all books that had been put out by Western Producer Prairie Books.

This collection was generated and collected by Western Producer Prairie Books. It primarily represents the years in which Prairie Books functioned as an independent department, 1975 to its demise. However, the majority of the books published by Western Producer Prairie Books are also included in this collection, extending from 1954 to 1988. Files pertaining to publishers and professional and governmental organizations which maintained a relationship with Prairie Books are also included. Of special note are the many books written by Grant MacEwan, who published through Western Producer Prairie Books for over twenty years.

This collection measures approximately 23 linear metres.

NOTE ON ARRANGEMENT - The filing system which was utilized by Western Producer Prairie Books has been maintained in this collection. Minor alteration in the order of headings has been made in order to connect similar groups of files.

A number of files contained no records and were therefore excluded from the finding aid. These files were as follows:
