Rope bridge in Nepal ~ Marcia Calkowski

Anthropology studies the human condition globally and cross-culturally, treating our way of life as only one among many. In an increasingly cosmopolitan world, where people from different places and backgrounds frequently interact, anthropology promotes an understanding of human variation. Among the key concepts is that of culture: the patterns of behaviour, thought, and feeling that people learn as members of social groups.

Students in Anthropology at the University of Regina take courses that cover many aspects of social and cultural life, many regions of the world, and many theories of culture and society. These courses are designed to develop students' ability to write, do social research, analyze ideas, synthesize information, and interpret the world in which we live.

Prerequisite: One course from ANTH 100, GEOG 100, any 100-level HIST course, INDG 101, PSCI 100 or SOC 100.

Fall 2016 (Evening Class)

ANTH 242 ~ ANTHROPOLOGY OF DEATH R 19:00-21:45 (Professor: TBA) Sept 7 - Dec 6

The main focus of this course will be a cross-cultural study of death and mortuary rituals. The dynamic relationships that exist between living and deceased members of communities and nations will be explored through attentive review of early and contemporary ethnographic research. This course will demonstrate that ethnographic engagement with death and mortuary rituals can help reveal and further understandings of fundamental aspects of our social lives.
