Current interests and activities

I continue to invest in a long-term project of mine of addressing morality from a social anthropological perspective. Most of my work has focused on the indigenous Amazonian People of the Centre, but over the last few years I've begun to do research on moral understandings in science and in relation to controversial cultural practices. I am currently working on a memoir-type moral auto-bio-ethnography, tying insights from ethnographic research into the relations between sociality, history, and personhood, to my own family of birth and upbringing in Colombia. My hope is to produce an accessible book-length piece for an educated lay public.

Since 2010 I have invested an important proportion of my time to collegial governance at the University of Regina, as Department Head (2010-2015) and as Chief Negotiator of the University of Regina Faculty Association Collective Bargaining team (2011-2012). I am currently the faculty member elected by University Council to the U of R's Board of Governors (2017-2023). I was president of the Society for the Anthropology of Lowland South America (2017-2020), and am one of four Directors of the Society for Ethnographic Theory (2019-present).
