New Hill HR Club

A needs assessment completed by students at the Paul J. Hill School found a gap between HR students and the HR industry. These results prompted students to establish the Hill Human Resources Club in January 2016, with the purpose of bringing together those students interested in the field of Human Resource Management. The group hopes to foster awareness and establish connections in the HR industry to help prepare students for future careers.

has been its ability to grow at a rapid pace within a short amount of time. Membership currently consists of 38 members and 8 executives. The group plans to organize case competitions, networking events and educational workshops on Human Resource Management, and is committed to the interests of all HR students in the Faculty.

After only a few months of being established, The HR Business Club has already hosted its first successful event called "A Day with HR Professionals".
