If you have been past the College Avenue Campus recently, you will know that all but the front façade of the Conservatory Building is now gone and so is the Gallery Building; the construction project is moving ahead at full speed. As the buildings have been coming down, planning for what will come next has also been happening.

Throughout the fall University and Conservatory representatives have met with the architects to talk about the needs of all stakeholders and what the revitalized campus will look like. Lessons have been learned from the Palliser Building and feedback on studio size has been received and taken into account when planning the new space.

Please join us on Monday, January 23 from 3:00-4:30 pm in room 109 at the Palliser Building when representatives from P3A Architecture, Harvey King, and Christa Eidsness will provide an overview of the newly designed space and answer questions about the construction project and plans for the revitalized space.

Who’s Who at the Conservatory

The new year brings with it changes in office staff at the Conservatory. While Alison Tkach is a familiar face, it has been a year since she’s been present in the Conservatory office and job responsibilities have shifted. In December Erika Folnovic was hired to fill our Program Coordinator position permanently.

Below you will find a quick reference guide for staff responsibilities.

Alison Tkach
Alison has responsibilities to both the Conservatory and Assistant Director’s office. See Alison for any of the following things:
- recital and scholarship forms, programs, and questions
- booking a room for a recital or studio event
- arranging for alternate teaching space when needed
- getting a studio key, new name plate, or furniture in your studio
- updating your biography

Erika Folnovic
Erika’s responsibilities include developing group programs and camps, hiring and overseeing group program instructors, marketing, and promotion of the Conservatory through our Facebook page.

Christa Eidsness
Christa’s responsibilities include overseeing the general operations of the Conservatory, hiring and working with private lesson instructors, and liaising with the wider university community and arts groups in the city of Regina.
