What is the award?

The Dr. John Archer Library Award was established in 2012. It is awarded to one full-time undergraduate student from the University of Regina and the three federated colleges. The student must demonstrate written evidence of significant inquiry using the Library’s resources and services, and what s/he learned about the research and information-gathering and citing process for their graded course project. The award is given annually based upon comments written in a one page reflective essay.

How am I recognized? The student wins $1,000 and receives a signed certificate, name engraved on plaque, and poses with trophy in a private ceremony. The reflective essay, graded course project, and ceremony photos are deposited in oURspace. Photos are also used for promoting the award next year.

When can I apply? Undergraduate students can apply in early January (once the Winter Semester has begun) for course work completed in the previous Fall, Winter, Spring or Summer Semester.

What is the deadline? February 1, 2018

How can I apply for the award? The application form is available online at the Student Awards and Financial Aid Office’s (SAFA) Student Awards Management System (SAMS):

http://www.uregina.ca/safa/awards/SAMS/

All applications must be submitted to SAFA. SAFA staff are available to answer questions about the application and submission process.

The Library also has information about the award. Library staff will not provide assistance with the application or writing the reflective essay.

How is a winner chosen? Librarians sit on an award judging panel. They receive copies of all eligible applications from SAFA. The panel marks all reflective essays using a rubric and, if necessary, reads the graded assignments for reference.
