ANN LEGER-ANDERSON

JULY 20, 2006

BY BOBBI JUN WANG

REVISED
MAY 2012

Ann Leger-Anderson was born in Reading Pennsylvania, on August 15, 1936. She received her post secondary education from Ursinus College and Clark University, and earned a Ph.D. in History from the University of Iowa with specialization in American History. Leger-Anderson briefly taught at Idaho State University prior to moving to Canada in 1966 to teach at the University of Saskatchewan, Regina Campus.

Although, Leger-Anderson was trained in American history, her focus and research was on Canadian prairie women's history. She made a strong impact in this area with her role as a professor teaching undergraduate students, supervising undergraduate and graduate students, creating research networks; and publishing in the field.

Leger-Anderson eventually became a Canadian citizen; however she continued to teach American History and remained tied to that interest. She retired from the University of Regina in 2004 and remained involved with many organizations including working with the Editorial Board of Encyclopedia of Saskatchewan, working as a Research Fellow with the Canadian Plains Research Centre, being a Professor Emerita with the History Department and had maintained an association with the Organization of American Historians.

Some of Leger-Anderson contributions include: being one of founding members of the Women in Alberta and Saskatchewan History; being the editor for a newsletter and the chair for the Canadian Committee on Women's History; leading walking tours on women's history; and assisting other researchers by conducting surveys of archival resources. Leger-Anderson continued to live and work in Regina, Saskatchewan until her death on February 22, 2006.
