Acting Director's Message

I am pleased to present you our report for the period of July 1st, 2022, to June 30th, 2023. From January 1st, 2023, I have had the opportunity to serve as an Acting Director of SWRC during the sabbatical of the SWRC Director, Dr. Kara Fletcher. Hannah Nguyen, our Research Administrator, continued to enthusiastically support all our SWRC-related activities.

We are excited to share with you the many positive developments that have occurred during this time. We, as a Faculty-based research centre, have had an incredibly successful year. Our researchers actively engaged in research, publishing, and community outreach and partnered with the media to raise awareness about important issues and made the research accessible to all.

Our Research Associates have accomplished a great deal during this period; they secured funding for various research projects, including an endowed Research Chair position affiliated with the Child Trauma Research Centre (2022-2025) and multiple Tri-Council, provincial, and internal grants and research contracts. They received funding for research on topics like rural health, harm reduction, support for people aging with HIV and cognitive concerns, international students' experiences with orientation and settlement, islamophobia, and enhancing teaching quality through mentorship for instructors, among others. Our Research Associates also partnered with researchers from other universities to contribute to topics like girls' and women's health, homelessness, harm reduction, land-based learning, and equity-based data and learning for post-COVID-19 recovery in Saskatchewan. We were pleased that three of our Research Associates received the Queen Elizabeth II Platinum Jubilee Medal for 2022 and 2023.

We believe engagement with communities and non-funded research and knowledge mobilization activities are equally important. That is why we organized Lunch & Learn Research talks, which we shared with the academics, students, and the community. Going forward, we will continue supporting our Research Associates and connect with the community and beyond. We look forward to what the future holds and cannot wait to see what our Research Associates will achieve next.

SWRC Seed Grants

Dr. Andrew Eaton - Project Title: Civilian and Co-response Crisis Mental Health Programs: Scoping Review and Partnership Formation

Dr. Festus Moasun - Project Title: Exploring the Role of the Church in the Settlement and Psychosocial Well-being of Newcomers to Saskatoon Amid COVID-19

Dr. Fritz Pino - Project Title: Transfeminism as Resistance: A Critical Genealogy to Highlight Trans Women of Colour

Dr. Miguel Sanchez - Project Title: The Experiences of Immigrants in Chile

Dr. Takhmina Shokirova - Project Title: Violence and Healing: The Effect of Islamophobia, Hate Crimes, and Hate Incidents on the Muslim University Student Community in SK

Launched in the Fall of 2022, the SWRC Seed Grant initiative aimed to provide financial support for internal researchers to explore their research ideas. Applications were peer-reviewed by external reviewers. Each successful project received $5,000.

In its first round, SWRC received a total of five applications. All five projects received positive feedback from an independent reviewer. The projects cover various topics, reflecting the diversity of the research environment of SWRC.

The program has received positive responses from SWRC internal research associates for its purposes and facilitation.

Description: Cognitive impairment may be the most prevalent age-related comorbidity for people aging with HIV, who experience accentuated or accelerated aging, causing risk for gerontological disabilities in their 50s and 60s. Peer-led focus groups discussed adapting cognitive remediation group therapy (CRGT) as a hybrid or online intervention. CRGT combined mindfulness-based stress reduction and brain training activities. Purposive sampling recruited people aging with HIV (40+) who self-identified cognitive concerns and resided in Ontario and Saskatchewan. Content analysis was employed on transcripts by 7 independent coders. Ten, two-hour focus groups were conducted between August and November 2022. Participants' (n=45) demographics included age (M=53.22, SD=7.62), gender (45% women, 42% men, 13% trans/non-binary), sexuality (42% gay, 40% heterosexual, 18% other), ethnicity (45% white, 33% black, 13% Indigenous, 9% mixed-race), and employment (33% employed, 67% retired/disability), and all were retained in care. Overall, participants responded favourably to CRGT's modalities and preferred a hybrid model blending in-person and online interactions. Preferred intervention facilitators were peers and mental health professionals. Knowledge of HIV's impacts on cognitive health, including HIV-associated neurocognitive disorder, was very low despite high reports of cognitive concerns (e.g., trouble remembering, impaired attention, difficulty problem-solving).

Description: Our community-based research team has been conducting CIHR-funded research regarding group therapies for HIV, aging, and cognition for almost ten years. This hybrid café scientifique will convene people aging with HIV and cognitive health concerns, community-based and clinical service providers, policymakers, and researchers. With in-person meeting space in Regina, SK, and Toronto, ON, alongside virtual attendance options, the meeting will be an opportunity for diverse panellists and participants to share knowledge regarding psychosocial management strategies for cognitive health while aging with HIV. Presentations will address: a) cognitive remediation group therapy (CRGT), a promising form of psychosocial support, and its plan for hybrid implementation in ON and SK; b) diagnostic issues associated with HIV-Associated Neurocognitive Disorder (HAND) and screening options; and c) preferences and uncertainties of Canadians aging with HIV. Bolstered by diverse peer-facilitated breakout group discussions and multiple language interpretations, this meeting will provide an opportunity for community-centered knowledge mobilization and enhance collective capacity to address cognitive health challenges amongst people aging with HIV.

Description: Heterosexually-identified men who have sex with men (H-MSM) may comprise ~8% of North America's sexually active cisgender adult male population. H-MSM may experience greater guilt and shame, have poorer relationship communication, and be at higher risk for HIV and STBBI transmission than both their gay and bisexual peers, and their concordant heterosexual peers. This multi-phase study consists of a scoping review, followed by phenomenological interviews with H-MSM in Ontario and Saskatchewan, followed by an online survey of H-MSM in Canada and the United States. The focus is on developing interventions (psychosocial supports and resources) relevant to the context of men experiencing sexual identity-behaviour discordance.

Newly Funded Projects

Description: Dr. Andrew Eaton and a team from AIDS Programs South Saskatchewan (APSS) are taking a unique approach to effectively targeting harm reduction strategies for people living with addictions.

Researchers will work to map 'hot-spots' for discarded needle incidences in Regina, then use this data to inform localized Naloxone training and harm reduction support groups. Their project will combine the efforts of knowledge-users, researchers, and those with lived experience, and conclude with an evaluation of the feasibility and benefit of this approach in reducing addictions-related harm.

Description: This research project is an exploration of mentorship and its potential benefits for Sessional Instructors' teaching and student learning in the Faculty of Social Work at the University of Regina. The overarching goal is to discover what connections there may be between mentorship and teaching, and how Sessional Instructors' teaching may be influenced once mentorship is provided. Summarily, findings will indicate if, and to what extent, mentorship benefits teaching and learning, and the potential for establishing a formal mentorship program for Sessional Instructors in the Faculty of Social Work.
