

University of Regina Staff: Important Information for Monday, March 16

The University is actively investigating opportunities for staff to work remotely where possible.

Until remote work decisions are made, University staff members are expected to maintain their usual practice regarding presence on campus.

Faculty members working to transition their courses to distance delivery are free to come to campus, or work from other locations.

We will keep staff updated regarding remote working scenarios as details become available.

To all members of the University faculty and staff, thank you again as we move through this period of rapid and unavoidable change. Your support of the University's mission of teaching, research, and service is deeply appreciated.